UNIVERSITY CENTER.

Tuesday evening was a dark, chilly uight on the streets of Baxter Springs and sickness deprived several of the class from enjoying a rich entertainment. We should all for the most of the year we are permitted to enjoy a genuine Florida climate and that it is only very seldom that we are compelled to feel a New England atmosphere.

The program for the evening was a great change from our usual work: Miss Minette Hoffmeister from Beloit, Kansas, who has been spending several weeks in Baxter with her cousin, Miss Ida Nichols, was present, and opened the exercises with two choice selections upon the piano-very few persons can draw more genuine music from an instrument than this charming lady. The reader at a glance will perceive that her name is German and suggests the home of the master musicians of the world although she is American born.

So charmed were the class some members proposed that we continue with the prelude and then continue with interludes of the same kind through the entire evening, but the leader called for the literary work with the assurance that during the evening they should have ample opportunity for the enjoyment of what was seldom found in Baxter Springs or other small

As Dr. Thompson was absent Mrs. Noble was requested to take his part, which was the introduction of the Roman, Horace, and to read his "Epistle to Lollius," written in his latter years and manifesting that the poet was master of his field in literature, and that only one excelled him, and that was Vir-

Tacitus was then introduced as a historian confessedly without a superior in the republic of letters. If he does not flash like Livy, he burns as study and as strong as Thucydides. No more weighty, uo more serious, no more penetrating. no sounder, truer, manlier mind than Tacitus ever wrote history.

Miss Rhoda Bowers was asked to read an extract from his works which so much resembled Macauley's gorgeous introduction to his history of England, only more musical.
